Grey Literature Day now celebrated on May 16th

Grey Literature Day is commemorated on May 16th, a day on which the International Grey Literature Community seeks to manifest its presence and responsibility for a wealth of diverse document types both in print and electronic formats that may appear less visible but are often the basis for research and development for science and the public good. Grey Literature Day is celebrated by multiple stakeholders responsible for both the supply and demand sides of these valued assets.

The Grey Literature Day likewise celebrates the signing of the "Pisa Declaration on Policy Development for Grey Literature Resources" published on May 16, 2014 and now translated into more than 16 languages worldwide. The Pisa Declaration provides a roadmap for this field of information and library science that has been charted over the past couple of decades and which is intent on guiding grey literature communities well into this century.
